Y NAME IS SEEPEETZA

Given the hardships, the brutality and the terror that Seepeetza suffered at R.S., her choice of narrative might lack excitement for readers who are often accustomed to sensationalized descriptions of these kinds of events. By refusing to dramatize situations that clearly have sensational potential, Sterling subtly executes her socio-pedagogical goals. What she portrays as her norm forces readers to think about how events described would affect a child.

Reconciliation

The LIRR team wishes to acknowledge and thank the following members of the congregation for their reconciliation actions:

Amy Bautista - for her teaching, both at the church and at school, and for obtaining the large First Nations large floor map for display at the church.

Betty Mackey - for her past service on the LIRR team and her continuing support by referring Indigenous education-related articles.

Helen Arnott - for past service on the committee and for demonstrating a continued interest by informing us of educational opportunities.

Janice McGregor - for her ongoing interest as shown by sending us many emails and pictures of reconciliation activities and learning events.

Ken Bautista - for promptly posting a new message from LIRR on the website.

New members and visitors are welcome at our meetings. If you don't wish to attend a meeting, suggestions are always welcome and may be placed in our mailbox #26 in the church office.

Outreach:

For the 2022 Advent season Outreach is once again asking congregants to make donations to our "Christmas Project Fund" to enable our church to make contributions to White Gift Sunday. This year, proceeds will be distributed evenly between: St. Alberts Community Village and ICPM (The Inner City Pastoral Ministry). ICPM, while separate from Bissell, maintains its office in the Bissell Center, conducts Sunday worship services and serves lunch after church for over 200 inner city folks. They are not funded by the government instead relying on support from various churches including area United Churches. Donations to the "Christmas Project Fund" can be made by e-transfer, through our offerings or by cheque using the byline Christmas Project Fund. The deadline for donations is November 30, 2022.

Outreach thanks you for your generosity!
